

A Little Matter of Genocide: Linking US Aggression Abroad to the Repression of Indigenous Peoples

Saturday, 19 March 2005

Last Updated Saturday, 03 February 2007

Making the Links was on hand when controversial indigenous rights activist Ward Churchill lectured in North Battleford, Saskatchewan on March 19, 2005.

In this lecture Ward Churchill traces the current US aggression overseas back in history showing that the country's ability to project power and violence outward is directly dependent upon the repression and dispossession of Indigenous peoples within its claimed borders. {enclose churchillnb.mp3}

Following the lecture, Ward Churchill engaged in a question and answer session where Churchill addresses some of the recent controversy around his post 9-11 essay "On the Justice of Roosting Chickens".

{enclose churchillnbqa.mp3}