In this show author and activist Maude Barlow looks at the idea of deep integration between the United States and Canada; a concept that has gained in popularity and momentum in elite circles in the post 9/11 world. Barlow discusses the implications of buying into economic, political and security integration with the US and shows that alarm bells should be going off with people who care about democracy and sovereignty across Canada. {enclose barlow-deep-int.mp3}

This is the second part of a series of three lectures on Understanding the Corporate Agenda by some of Canada's most well-known activists and critics of the corporate agenda.
